Dear Friends,

Since the creation of the new Midwest Province, it has been a great joy to travel throughout the 12-state region to meet with Jesuits and visit our ministries. Along the way, I have been honored to meet many existing and new friends and benefactors. I am filled with gratitude for the good work we do together, and I have deep hope for our future. The Jesuit mission is alive and well in the Midwest.

Following the ordination of 13 new Jesuit priests this past summer, 15 young men professed their first vows, and we welcomed 7 novices into the Society (see pages 4-5). I am confident that these Jesuits will continue to live out the example set by St. Ignatius in their new roles and studies. Please join me in praying for these Jesuits as they strive to set the world on fire!

In this issue of Jesuits magazine, you also will learn more about our With Others. For Others. Campaign for Senior Jesuit Healthcare. As we face a record number of senior Jesuits in need of healthcare, this $25 million capital campaign is essential to meet our healthcare needs today and for the future. Your vital support is a way to give thanks to the Jesuits who have positively impacted you and so many others through their lives of service. I thank you for your consideration and prayers.

Also in this issue we celebrate some of the ways the Jesuits and our lay colleagues are serving at the frontiers through theatre, prison ministry, Native American ministry, and much more.

During this season of Thanksgiving and New Life, please be assured of our gratitude and prayers.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

Brian G. Paulson, SJ

A Half Century of Service: Honoring Jesuit Jubilarians

Midwest Jesuits celebrating 50 years in the Society of Jesus reflect on the words that encapsulate their lives of service.

The Campaign for Senior Jesuit Healthcare
Senior Jesuits have given their lives in service of others. Now, through the With Others. For Others. campaign, you can thank them with your support.

Lessons from Prison Ministry
“We are not our mistakes.” Fr. Gene Merz, SJ, writes of his ministry at the oldest women’s prison in the United States and how he was been impacted by the women he meets.

Creating Brave Spaces
Damian Torres-Botello’s desire to create safe and brave spaces where voices can be revealed and listened to comes from his passion for theatre and his Jesuit vocation.

15 Novices Proclaim First Vows

15 Jesuit novices of the USA Midwest Province proclaimed first vows — their first public profession of commitment to the Society of Jesus — at Saint Thomas More Catholic Church in St. Paul, Minnesota, on August 12.

A novice spends two years at the novitiate for the first stage of Jesuit formation, which then culminates in first vows. Each Jesuit makes the proclamation of vows individually in front of the Eucharist, just as St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Jesuits, and some of his first companions did. They also receive a vow cross that they will keep for the rest of their lives.

By the time a novice kneels at the altar to pronounce vows, he is prepared, says Fr. William O’Brien, SJ, director of the Jesuit Novitiate of St. Alberto Hurtado in St. Paul, Minnesota. “As he speaks the final words of the vow formula to God, he does so with complete trust.”

The 15 Midwest Jesuits were part of a total of 28 novices from the United States, Canada, and Haiti who proclaimed the vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience in August. Following the profession of first vows, Jesuits preparing to be priests usually begin three years of studies: two years of philosophy studies, combined with one year of graduate-level theology courses. Those men who took vows as a Jesuit brother will usually take several theology courses and work on an advanced degree in a field of interest.

Manresa Jesuit Retreat House Installs 15th Station of the Cross

A new distinctive prayer space graces the grounds of Manresa Jesuit Retreat House in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, with three life-size bronze statues of Jesus and two disciples on the road to Emmaus. Behind Jesus’ shoulder is a replica of his empty tomb, complementing the theme of the Risen Christ. Completed May 25 and dedicated in the fall, the new station joins Manresa’s 14 other outdoor stations, which were restored in 2012.

The idea to add a 15th station originated with members of Manresa’s leadership team and board member Isaac Hanna. Thanks to the commitment of two generous donors, plans were quickly underway, with landscape architect/builder Jeff White commissioned to design and install the tomb and Emmaus sites and sculptor Reni Stephan commissioned to fashion the three figures. Father Fran Daly, SJ, executive director of Manresa, dedicated the empty tomb on June 3, 2016.

“We are so pleased to offer retreatants and visitors this place to quietly meditate on Christ’s resurrection,” said Fr. Daly. “And we are especially grateful to those donors who made this added station a reality.”

Jesuits Magazine Wins Catholic Press Association Awards

“Exceptionally informative and interesting,” wrote the CPA Awards committee about Jesuits. “This magazine uses a variety of methods to tell its stories, and those stories are sharply honed to pass on good writing.”

The award for Magazine/Newsletter of the Year follows the Midwest Jesuits’ redesign of their magazine to prepare for the Chicago-Detroit and Wisconsin Provinces joining to become the USA Midwest Province. The magazine took second place for Best Redesign.

Other awards included honorable mentions for “Band of Brothers,” an article about Fr. Vincent Strand, SJ, and his two brothers sharing a vocation to the priesthood, in the Best Reporting on Vocations to Priesthood, Religious Life, or Diaconate category and “The Audacity to Seek the Impossible,” an article about Jesuit Fr. Arturo Sosa’s election as 31st Superior General of the Society of Jesus, in the Best Layout of Article or Column: Religious Order Magazine category.
New US Leader Appointed for Pope’s Prayer Network

Father William Blazek, SJ, was appointed US director of the Pope’s Worldwide Prayer Network (PWPN) in June 2017, succeeding Fr. James Kubicki, SJ, who served 14 years in the role. Founded as the Apostleship of Prayer and recently renamed by Pope Francis, PWPN communicates the pope’s monthly prayer intentions to 50 million members in 89 countries, with a youth branch — the Eucharistic Youth Movement (EYM) — in 56 countries. Membership in PWPN, which is available at www.popesprayerusa.net, involves “a commitment to offer yourself to God for his purposes each day.”

The network traces its roots to France in 1844, where a group of Jesuit seminarians, anxious to hurry their studies so they could set out as missionaries, were instructed by their spiritual director to use their time and talents to save souls as “apostles of prayer.” In 1879, the group received its first statutes, approved by Pope Pius IX. In addition to sharing the pope’s prayer intentions, PWPN also maintains a devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and has been entrusted by the pope to the Jesuits.

PWPN has made use of new technology to further its mission. Last year, it launched “The Pope Video,” a monthly video that shares the pope’s prayer intentions, and “Click to Pray,” an app that offers users a digital way to accompany Pope Francis in his intentions.

St. Francis Mission Returns Land to Rosebud Sioux Tribe

On May 2, 2017, St. Francis Mission returned 525 acres of unused Church land to the Rosebud Sioux Tribe on the Rosebud Indian Reservation in south-central South Dakota. A Jesuit ministry among 20,000 Lakota (Sioux) people, St. Francis Mission was founded in 1886 and consists of six parishes and a number of health, education, and communication ministries.

“Saint Francis Mission should not continue to hold land that it is no longer using for Church purposes,” said Fr. John Hatcher, SJ, former president of St. Francis Mission. “I am grateful to the Rosebud Sioux Tribe for the use of this land and happy that we can return it for the use of the Lakota people.”

In 1881, Chief Spotted Tail invited Jesuit priests to educate the Lakota people. The federal government and the Rosebud Sioux Tribe granted the mission land to support a school and to construct churches and cemeteries throughout the reservation. Eventually, 23 mission stations were built, some encompassing as much as 40 to 80 acres of land to support Native catechists and their families. As the Native population moved from the prairie into cluster housing, churches closed, while the mission retained possession of the land.

Through the proactive efforts of the mission, the Rosebud Sioux Tribe, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, all unused land will be returned except for places in which the mission has active operations.

World Union of Jesuit Alumni Meets at John Carroll University

For the first time ever, the World Union of Jesuit Alumni (WUJA) Congress was held in North America at John Carroll University in University Heights, Ohio, from June 28 to July 2, 2017.

The gathering brought together roughly 500 people representing Jesuit schools, parishes, and ministries from 27 countries. The official theme was “Uniting Our Jesuit Frontiers.”

WUJA was founded in 1956 in Bilbao, Spain, to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola. The organization gathers Jesuit alumni to build international networks and discern how to promote peace and justice in a global and sustainable world. The three-day program featured about 30 breakout sessions on topics ranging from the arts, business, medical science, and law to spirituality, service, and leadership. It also featured roughly 60 speakers, including Fr. Timothy Kesicki, SJ, president of the Jesuit Conference of Canada and the United States, and best-selling authors Chris Lowney and Fr. James Martin, SJ.

“It’s awesome to see that people who have already graduated still have the same action and enthusiasm surrounding being Jesuit educated that I do,” said Lauren Dickerson, a student at Wheeling Jesuit University.
New Novices

Matthew Bjorklund, 32, was born and raised in St. Paul, Minnesota. He earned a degree in Film & Television Production from Brown College and went on to co-found Slate of Mind Productions. He has received awards for his feature film and numerous short films and has gained attention in the Twin Cities for his work. For the past several years, Matt has worked as a union steward for SEIU and as a political organizer for the DFL House Caucus, along with 15 years of service as a paraprofessional in the public school system. In the spring semester of 2017, he served as a Jesuit donné in Detroit, serving those encountering homelessness at the Pope Francis Center. He enjoys watching films, sports, reading, writing, and is a fitness enthusiast.

Carl Caceres, 28, earned a BA in philosophy and theology/religious studies from the University of Scranton and a master’s in student affairs in higher education from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. He has worked as a hall director, academic adviser, and most recently as a campus minister, coordinating retreats for students at Xavier University in Cincinnati. Carl is a former tennis player and enjoys cheering on his favorite sports teams, watching thought-provoking films, and shooting free throws.

Spencer Liechty, 25, grew up in Indianapolis and graduated from Xavier University in Cincinnati with a bachelor’s in political science. After graduating, he was a team leader in AmeriCorps NCCC, worked at a transition housing program, and spent a year serving in the Jesuit Volunteer Corps as a patients’ rights advocate at a nonprofit law foundation in San Jose, California. Spencer enjoys learning about social justice issues, playing and watching sports, running, and traveling.
Michael Pederson, 27, grew up in Eastern Iowa and graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in psychology from St. John’s University in Collegeville, Minnesota. Michael then pursued a year of community and volunteer work through Amate House in Chicago. This work led to more years of community service, teaching in Loyola Marymount University’s PLACE Corps program, teaching and earning a graduate degree in secondary education. He is passionate about the environment. He enjoys playing most sports, coaching soccer and wrestling, reading, watching anything narrated by David Attenborough, and learning languages, especially Spanish.

Conor Sullivan, 25, is a native of Hingham, Massachusetts. He graduated from the College of the Holy Cross in 2014 with a degree in history and theatre. After college, Conor joined the Jesuit Volunteer Corps and worked at Cristo Rey Jesuit High School in Minneapolis as a gym instructor. Upon completing JVC, he worked for an additional year at Cristo Rey in the assistant principal’s office. Conor enjoys puzzles, yard games, podcasts, singing, and Boston sports. Conor also collects flags and plays multiple instruments.

Jonathon Wojtkowiak, 23, spent the 2016-2017 academic year as a donné at Red Cloud Indian School in South Dakota, where he was a P.E. instructor for grades K-8. It was there that he became more familiar with the Jesuit way of life and ministry. During that school year he applied to the Society of Jesus and was accepted. Jonathon spent much of his youth in Gaylord, Michigan, and went to college at Central Michigan University in Mt. Pleasant, Michigan. He graduated from CMU with a bachelor’s degree in economics and statistics. Jonathon enjoys a wide variety of activities and is always open to trying new things. Jonathon enjoys life, laughs often, and during his free time, he can most often be found reading, studying Spanish, writing, or exercising.

Matthew Zurcher, 27, grew up in Warren, Pennsylvania. At Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, he initially pursued music composition and conducting before also studying theatre, literature, and American cultural history on his way to earning a Bachelor of Humanities and Arts. After brief appointments as a conductor and film critic, Matthew served for two years as a live-in manager at drug and alcohol recovery houses in Northeast Ohio. During this time, he encountered a joyful call to serve the rejected, poor, and incarcerated. He discovered the Jesuits after stumbling on the writings of Anthony de Mello and Pierre Teilhard de Chardin. He has spent the last year enjoying Jesuit community, teaching English, and driving a school bus at Red Cloud High School on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota. Matthew’s interests include ice cream, Phish, and songwriting.

“The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to proclaim good news to the poor. He has sent me to proclaim liberty to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty those who are oppressed” Luke 4:18
He is in our midst.” This is the response, translated from Portuguese, that the congregation gives to the priest’s initial greeting: “The Lord be with you.” It’s a unique response that reflects the way God calls us and shapes us by his body — in his people gathered, and in the bread broken and shared.

The youngest of eight children, I grew up in São Paulo, Brazil. Sundays were always chaotic as my parents had to rouse and herd all of us into two vehicles to get to church. Even if we miraculously made it on time and escaped being a distraction upon entrance, we inevitably brought attention to ourselves at some point because you simply can’t have my family gathered in silence for too long before giggles and pinches break out. Once we got home, we’d gather around our large dining room table and share a feast. Sundays were structured around the sacrament of the Eucharist, but every aspect of the day was sacramental. God was in our midst through it all.

Eventually, we moved to Iowa. I finished my middle and high school years in Ottumwa, Iowa, but, since Ottumwa didn’t have quite the same soccer culture as Brazil, I had to get my soccer fix each summer at Creighton University soccer camps. It was soccer that led me to enroll at Creighton, but the Jesuit spark is unavoidable at Creighton, and I got formed by it the way my faith was formed by those chaotic, God-infused Sundays growing up. That eventually led me to the Peace Corps in the Dominican Republic, where the vocational seeds that God had planted and was nourishing began to bloom.

On a monthly basis I’d travel a couple hours to attend Mass with Fr. Bill Johnson, SJ, at Creighton’s Institute for Latin American Concern (ILAC) center, an institute promoting health access to rural Dominicans. After Mass I’d join Fr. Bill and the rotating medical mission groups for a feast and take a nap in a hammock before heading back to my barrio in Puerto Plata. I was content with the justice-based work I was doing in Puerto Plata, but my attraction to doing it in a faith-based environment grew the more I got wrapped up in the ILAC community. Once again, the sacrament of the Eucharist was the center of that sacramental work of justice. And, with Fr. Bill as an encouraging example, I applied and entered the Midwest novitiate in St. Paul, Minnesota, upon the completion of my Peace Corps service.

God has continued to form me in the midst of diverse movement, peoples, and experiences. My novitiate experience took me all around the country and even to Lima, Peru, where God confirmed my desire to be in solidarity with Christ poor. Graduate studies in New York City allowed me to integrate academics with the ministry I did with people struggling with addiction in the Bronx. Now I am finding God in my students at Cristo Rey Jesuit High School in Chicago — both in the classroom and on the soccer field as a coach. God’s people, especially those on the margins of society, continue to remind me of God’s presence in our midst and motivate me to continue on this path toward priesthood so that I might have a part in highlighting all these sacramental moments through the celebration of the sacraments.

By Andrew Hanson, SJ

Andrew Hanson, SJ, is a Jesuit scholastic teaching theology at Cristo Rey Jesuit High School in Chicago, Illinois. He studied philosophy and Christian spirituality at Fordham University in New York from 2014-2017 before landing at Cristo Rey to teach and coach the beautiful game of soccer.
Father Ed Sthokal, SJ, had never considered becoming a retreat director; he never even specifically trained for it. The plan for the young Jesuit was to teach English literature, perhaps go on to run a university department in the field.

So how did he end up spending 58 years as a retreat director at Demontreville Retreat House in Lake Elmo, Minnesota?

Like a walk through a labyrinth, he says.

“When I was choosing my final stage of training in English literature, I was looking at studying at Oxford, maybe Cambridge,” Fr. Sthokal recalls. “But I balked. Although I had been heading in that direction, I realized it wasn’t for me.”

He had been ordained in 1954, finished the theology period of his Jesuit formation in 1956, served as associate pastor at Milwaukee’s Church of the Gesu, and then taught English and theology for a few years at Campion Jesuit High School in Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin. But when the time came to move on for further study in his field, it wasn’t for him. So, Fr. Sthokal was assigned — temporarily — to work at Demontreville.

“I don’t think I had ever heard of the place at the time. Now I think it’s the best retreat house in the country, of course,” he chuckles. “I hadn’t even given a men’s retreat until I arrived there. But it turned out to be the perfect fit.”

Reflecting on the process, he adds, “A lot of things had to happen. Everything that came before was — unbeknownst to me — preparing me for work at Demontreville. Detours merged into focus at a place I hadn’t even known existed. It might have seemed a circuitous route, but all of my experiences led to decades in a joyful ministry.”

Over the years, his ministry has taken him to many states — from Florida to Colorado to Hawaii — and other parts of the world — including Germany, Ireland, France, Greece, and the Holy Land — as well as activities, including golfing, skiing, and raising dogs and horses. Exchanges with other retreat houses landed him in Atlanta, New Orleans, Detroit, and more.

“Tough work!” he jokes, adding, “Someone could ask, ‘Where did you find the time to give more than 300 retreats at Demontreville?’ But my answer, again, is that everything I did was preparation for another retreat. Ignatius would call it finding God in all things. Teilhard de Chardin would say we find materials for our tasks of collaborating with God in creating and redeeming the world everywhere. While I might have had fewer assignments than many Jesuits, I enjoyed a diversified experience with a rich variety of people in a rich variety of places.”

At 95 — and the oldest resident at the St. Camillus Senior Jesuit Community in Wauwatosa, Wisconsin — Fr. Sthokal says some health concerns led to his current assignment, where medical needs can be addressed. Technically, however, he’s never left Demontreville. “I left the place, but not the experiences,” he says. “I have physical, spiritual, and intellectual experiences from there that I carry with me every day.”

Father Ed Sthokal, SJ has led retreats at Demontreville for 58 years. He now lives in a senior Jesuit healthcare community. Read Fr. Sthokal’s spiritual reflection on the power of giving retreats on page 20.

ABOUT THE DEMONTREVILLE RETREAT HOUSE

Each year more than 3,000 men from all walks of life participate in retreats at the Demontreville Jesuit Retreat House — where the experiences have one theme: “to know, love, and serve God in this world.”

The daily schedule includes four or five general conferences of about 30 minutes each, based on the Spiritual Exercises, followed by a free reflection period. Strict silence is maintained, except for an optional recreation time, as “being silent in a beautiful natural setting with no agenda and nowhere to go, waiting, and listening for God to speak are key ingredients for communicating with God.”
More than 100 Jesuits live in one of the Midwest Province senior Jesuit healthcare communities, living their mission to pray for the Church and Society.

The Campaign for Senior Jesuit Healthcare
Walking down the hallway in the St. Camillus senior Jesuit healthcare community, Father Doug Leonhardt, SJ, the superior of the community, spots Father Thomas Caldwell, SJ.

“I am glad I ran into you, Tom,” says Fr. Leonhardt. “I was just talking on the phone with Susan. She always mentions your theology class as one of the best she took. Susan asked the Jesuits to pray for her youngest daughter, who is a freshman in college in Minnesota. She is homesick and finding the adjustment very difficult. Besides putting a note on our Prayer Request Board, I told Susan I would mention her request especially to you.”

Fr. Caldwell smiles. “Happy to pray for her, Doug,” he says. “I’ll give Susan a call.”

Later in the week, he and the Jesuit community received the weekly list of prayer requests that are submitted through JesuitPrayer.org. The Jesuits pray over these requests individually and at Mass together each day.

“Jesuits never truly retire and prayer is an integral part of their lives,” says Fr. Brian Paulson, SJ, provincial of the Midwest Province. “So, when a Jesuit reaches the age where he requires living assistance, he receives a special mission to pray for the Church and Society.”

To pray for the Church and Society means that a Jesuit’s primary focus is to ask God for the success of their fellow Jesuits and the People of God, including those who submit prayer requests. Fr. Caldwell and nearly 100 fellow Jesuits perform this role at one of the two senior Jesuit assisted living communities in the Midwest Province.

“In my experience, the men take their mission to pray very seriously,” says Fr. Robert Wild, SJ. “It does not mean that they are praying all the time but it does mean that they are serious about this dimension of their lives. They remain outward looking so that they are not just fretting about their own health situation but instead they continue to have that larger vision as Jesuits.”

Fr. Wild is the Honorary Co-Chair of With Others. For Others. — an essential campaign to raise $25 million needed for senior Jesuit healthcare. The name With Others. For Others. is meant as an invitation to financially support Jesuit priests and brothers who have devoted their lives to serving others and the greatest needs.

“These men are living longer and, with that, comes increased healthcare needs,” says Fr. Paulson. “There is a significant population of Jesuits in their 70s, 80s, and 90s. Here in the Midwest we project that we will need both the Colombiere Center in Michigan as well as St. Camillus in Milwaukee for the next 15-20 years. They will both be full or close to full.”

Fr. Doug Leonhardt, SJ

Many people require living assistance as they get older and Jesuits are no exception. Like the rest of the nation, there is a historically high number of senior Jesuits serving in the province and, even with financially sound measures taken, the cost of providing for their healthcare needs is rising. The healthcare needs are supported through the Aged and Infirm Fund, which has also provided for the enhancement of the St. Camillus community residence to meet the needs of today’s senior Jesuits.

Now, the fund needs to be replenished to maintain the healthcare and living expenses for the senior Jesuits and the province is asking those who have been positively impacted by the Jesuits for their support. Generous donations from benefactors are both essential and appreciated.

“I’m very grateful for the generosity of the donors so that these men can get the best care we can afford as they move into their final years of life,” says Fr. Leonhardt. “This is one of the best ways people can say thank you to these Jesuits who have spent their lives in service.”

FUNDING AND FLEXIBILITY

The Jesuit mission is to serve where there is a need. So, when the historically high number of senior Jesuits needed more space for assisted living, the province funded the expansion of the St. Camillus senior Jesuit community.

The Midwest Jesuits decided to use $25 million from the Aged and Infirm Fund and leased the building from the St. Camillus healthcare campus. The province opted to pre-fund the lease, which means that instead of monthly payments that would have carried interest, the province paid the bill all at once. This enables the province to save approximately $1.9 million per year on lease costs.

This move was in response to the considerable number of senior Jesuits, as well as a move to secure the healthcare needs for all Midwest Jesuits — including those in formation — for the long-term future. The Jesuits can lease additional living units on the St. Camillus healthcare campus if they need more space, and they can also sell unused units back to St. Camillus so that the units are not empty.
who have spent their lives in service.”

Living in community with other Jesuits is a fundamental aspect of that Jesuit service, which is why Fr. Wild says, “We do not want these to be healthcare facilities that have Jesuits, but Jesuit communities that provide healthcare.” Moving to an assisted living community can be challenging for many people and the same is true for Jesuits. Sharing that journey with their fellow Jesuits can help them adjust to their new mission in life.

“I think the transition can be difficult because they move from communities they maybe have belonged to for a long time,” Fr. Leonhardt says. “I think once they get here and into the rhythm of things they see that this is a privileged time in their life. They join their classmates with whom they’ve learned and served. It’s just wonderful to know there are companions here for them.”

Theresa Kult, the Coordinator of Healthcare for the Omaha and St. Paul region of the Midwest Province has witnessed the importance of the senior Jesuit communities. She says, “There’s a renewed energy in them. They have this shared journey as Jesuits their whole lives — men who have been really committed and have managed the struggles of religious life. They can reassure one another and that is very important.”

In addition to supporting each other, the Jesuits still work to positively impact the world. Brother James Small, SJ, continues his hobby of painting beautiful portraits and scenes that he happily donates to Loyola Academy for scholarship fundraising.

“Painting is a great hobby and I can’t pray all day long anyway,” says Br. Small. “I look forward to going to my easel every day.”

Like Br. Small, the Jesuits each enjoy their own hobbies. They play shuffleboard, read books, and write letters to old friends and family. Their mission to serve the world through prayer, however, remains their primary focus.

“We don’t have a feeling that we’re coming to the end because we never come to the end as a Jesuit,” says Fr. Theodore Ross, SJ. “We just keep going and Jesuit priests and brothers live together in communities their entire lives, even in senior healthcare communities.

Before joining the Jesuits, I practiced optometry for 10 years. Since I was a child, my dream was to be a doctor. I believe this desire originated after visiting my family physician. I was attracted to the way my doctor showed a very caring attitude toward me and other patients, and I left that office with a great conviction that I wanted to do the same.

After finishing high school, I followed my dream by going to Howard University in Washington, D.C., for a summer and taking prep courses to enter a pre-medicine program at Kent State University. It did not take long to realize medical school was not the place for me. I did not like physicians’ hours and couldn’t stomach the thought of surgery. I was faced with the dilemma that my dreams might not be what God intended.

During this time, I visited my local eye doctor, who informed me that there were two providers for eye care: optometrists (primary eye care) and ophthalmologists (eye surgeons). After four years of optometry school, optometrists serve the public by diagnosing and treating eye conditions. I felt God directing my path toward my dream.

After graduating from optometry school, I began my own practice in my home town, Lorain, Ohio. The first few years were challenging, but the hard work eventually paid off. Since Lorain had a significant Latino population, my bilingualism was advantageous. At the same time, I was very involved at my home parish, La Capilla del Sagrado Corazón de Jesús. I participated in RCIA and youth ministry and also began incorporating my practice with my faith, doing optometric service work at schools and nursing homes. After going on a mission trip to El Salvador in 1998, I realized the Lord was drawing me to another way of life. The work I saw the priests and religious brothers and sisters doing at my parish and in El Salvador had the same effect on me as my family doctor had.

I began discerning a religious vocation, recognizing my joys and satisfactions as I went through my daily activities. A Franciscan sister, Suzanne Susany, OSF, pointed me toward the Jesuits. After reading about their apostolates — especially the Cristo Rey schools — I was intrigued and met with the vocation director, Fr. Dan Reim, SJ. In 2000, I entered the novitiate and decided to become a brother a few years after joining.

Just as there are two separate eye care professions (optometrists and ophthalmologists), there are two separate Jesuit vocations (priests and brothers). When I was an optometrist, people would say, “Oh, so you didn’t go all the way to be an ophthalmologist.” I would explain that those are two different paths, like Jesuit priests and brothers: they are two different tracks, not one that leads to another. Just like optometry, a Jesuit brother’s vocation has value in its own right.

I have had many joys and opportunities since joining the Jesuits 17 years ago. I have taught mathematics at two Jesuit high schools, ministered to inmates at prisons with an RCIA program, served as an optometrist at the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota, and ministered to migrants with the Kino Border Initiative on the US-Mexican border. What God implanted in my dream as a child has opened many doors in how to bring Christ into the world. All I had to do was follow my dreams.

Br. Ralph Cordero, SJ, was raised in Puerto Rico and moved to Lorain, Ohio, as a child. He currently serves as socius to the director of novices at the Jesuit Novitiate of St. Alberto Hurtado in St. Paul, Minnesota.
Recently, my Muslim neighbor related to my wife and me that when she prays, she thinks of all God has given her and wants to give these things back to God. Her prayer reminded me of St. Ignatius of Loyola’s Suscipe (a prayer for generosity), which I copied and gave to her.

Ignatian spirituality has enriched and informed my life in many ways. My Ignatian roots stem from being a Jesuit in the Chicago Province from 1964 to 1973. Subsequent roles of husband, father, grandfather, and doctor provided ample opportunities for me to use the spiritual wisdom I learned as a Jesuit.

Five elements of Ignatian spirituality have been most useful: the First Principle and Foundation, discernment of spirits, contemplation in action, indifference, and the Suscipe.

The First Principle and Foundation establishes criteria to determine whether a particular action is beneficial. My answer to these questions has determined whether I adhered to my principles. Whether we formulate our own wording or use St. Ignatius’s, “Our one desire and choice should be what is more conducive to the end for which we are created.”

Discernment of spirits led me to pay attention to my deepest feelings, choosing that which provides true consolation and rejecting that which causes desolation. Every major decision in my life has involved discernment of spirits. Consolament’s role in the discernment process has convinced me that when we are true to our deepest selves, we are true to God. Discernment helps us discover our true nature.

Excerpt from the Suscipe

Contemplation in action was what first attracted me to the Jesuits. This Jesuit ideal means to be a deeply spiritual person engaged in bettering the world. The two years of Jesuit novitiate inculcated a practice of recollection which was to infuse all our activities. When I am engaged in an activity, I concentrate and am not thinking about God. When I am between activities, my mind goes to God in spontaneous prayer. Perhaps it is more accurate to say that my life is one of contemplation and action.

The ideal of indifference, or detachment, appears repeatedly in the Spiritual Exercises. Father Bob Ochs, SJ, warned us students to beware of our expectations (attachments), which can lead to disappointments. An art instructor I had at the University of California stated this another way: “Make plans, but don’t plan the outcome.”

Finally, the Suscipe served as a key prayer at a juncture in my life. Would I continue in a lucrative but unfulfilling medical practice or move to the Navajo Nation in Arizona and work for the Indian Health Service? During a retreat to discern this question, I focused on the last line of the Suscipe: “Give me your love and your grace, for this is sufficient for me.” It soon became clear that pursuing a path of service was more meaningful to me than higher revenue, and I submitted my application.

I am indebted to St. Ignatius and the Society of Jesus which carries on his traditions and teachings.

"Treat others as you want to be treated"
I became a Golden Rule (GR) fanatic on December 6, 1968, when I was a humble Jesuit novice. GR is subtle enough to be interesting and simple enough to permit a KITA acronym for using it wisely:

KNOW: “How would my action affect others?”

IMAGINE: “What would it be like to have this done to me in the same situation?”

TEST for Consistency: “Am I willing that if I were in the same situation then this be done to me?”

ACT toward others only as you’re willing to be treated in the same situation.

See www.harryhiker.com/gr for more information.

Gratitude and Mission
It is because of the grace of God that I am a Jesuit priest today, not because I earned or merited such a vocation. Sometimes I ask how it is that someone who grew up on a farm in Imogene, Iowa, ends up a Jesuit priest and why so many good things have happened to me. I do not have an answer, but a response that somewhat satisfies is a passage from a letter that St. John of the Cross wrote: “Men do not do these things but God, who knows what is suitable for us and arranges things for our good. Think nothing else but that God ordains all.”

FR. DAVID G. MATZKO, SJ
Gentle Love
It is not hard to remember my first day in the novitiate. It was a shock, and I ended the day telling myself it must get better. What was better was the gentle love of God. I have felt much like Elijah, who stood at the mouth of the cave before the destructive wind, earthquake, and all-consuming fire and discovered that God was in the silence of the soft, gentle breeze. What was better was the knowledge of how gentle God has cared for me the last 50 years and loved me more than I could even hope for.

FR. JAMES M. MCCANN, SJ
Joy and Astonishment
Jesuit joy is based on the joy of the Gospel message, on the growing (over a lifetime) awareness that God’s Spirit of Love is without limits. That joy also comes from belonging to a fellowship of companions of Jesus and belonging to what St. Thomas the Apostle Catholic Church in Chicago calls “God’s people in extraordinary variety,” the Church. Jubilee is a celebration for all of us. Let us rejoice and give thanks, and let us always remember that God still has many a surprise in store.
FR. J. THOMAS MCCLAIN, SJ

Availability

God “hooked” me with an attraction to the ministry of Jesuits working in secondary education. It turned out that I was a full-time teacher only two years of these 50 in the Society. Along the way, the Society has asked me to serve in roles to which I never felt called (parish ministry and finance) and several for which I expressed great disdain (president/fundraising)! To my surprise, God blessed each of these new missions in ways for which I will always be grateful. I learned that the “act” (my gifts) plays in many different venues! Availability has been one of the greatest blessings of my Jesuit life.

FR. RICHARD H. MCGURN, SJ

Acceptance

At age 22, I inquired about joining an unnamed archdiocese that serves a large and windy city and was told: “You’re too old!”

I grew up in Oak Park, Illinois, when our provincial house was still there. So, I took myself over there to inquire. I was warmly greeted by Br. Freddy Frowerk, SJ. Not many days later, I met one of my well-loved mentors, Fr. Paul Clifford, SJ, who arranged for me to teach at Loyola Academy in Wilmette, Illinois, while my application was being considered.

From those two men and many more Jesuits like them, I have experienced what “acceptance” means. And from them I’ve learned, during my years in parish and retreat ministry, how important it is to extend acceptance to the many people who come to us seeking help and consolation — people who often come up our walk anxiously and knock on our door, hoping to be well received.

Me Still Rowing...

... I am rowing, though the wind pushes me back and I know that that island will not be perfect ... This story ends with me still rowing.

“Rowing” By Anne Sexton

When I felt called to the Society of Jesus, it was as if I heard God say, “This is where you belong.” I didn’t know it at the time, but God set me firmly in the paradox of belonging and not-belonging. I belong. The Society accepted me. Fellow novices, scholastics, priests, and the people of God accepted me. And many yet do. What a blessing and joy!

I don’t belong. I have always lived on the outside of groups or persons to whom I’ve wanted to belong. Not enough.

Indeed, I am a wounded sinner, beloved and sent on mission. The grace that is at work in my life, still, is the grace from which I am learning to minister more authentically. God be praised!

FR. BRADLEY M. SCHAEFFER, SJ

Jesus and Jesuits

During my long retreat in Milford, Ohio, I remember saying to the Lord, “This is where I give you my heart.” Throughout these years of grace, it has been my goal to keep Jesus at the center of my life and to continue giving him that heart so he may do with it whatever he desires.

I’ve given most of my apostolic life to serving the Society directly. In each of those missions, I have come to truly love my brothers and what we are about. What a privilege to listen to how God works in and with them; what a privilege to accompany and mission them; what a privilege to serve the universal Society.

FR. DONALD M. SERVA, SJ

Bridge Building

In my vow paper of 1969, I used the phrase “bridge-builder” to describe my vocation and aspirations as a Jesuit. I thought building bridges between faith and science would be my contribution to the Jesuit enterprise of putting all things under Christ. Over the past 50 years, I have built bridges different from my original intention. I did regency in Kathmandu, Nepal. Naturally, one thinks of bridges between East and West. I taught high school in Cleveland. There, I enjoyed building contacts with families and students. I taught a course on faith and science at Wheeling Jesuit University in West Virginia. I have participated in work to the poor and underserved in Appalachia. Although I am approaching the end of my college teaching career, I am expecting to build another bridge to a third career in the near future. I look forward to discerning what it might be.

Returning Love

I am flooded, overwhelmed, so that I can’t begin to comprehend or express my gratitude. I want to give love equally in return, but it’s impossible. There’s too much, and I’m too incapable! This is my 50-year experience of God: sending me wave after wave of love and care and devotion, even in the solitude of my annual retreat. I can never return to others, nor to the Lord, all the love poured out on me.
Forget it! Impossible!” That was my initial gut reaction to being invited to write a brief account of my ministry this past decade to women at Framingham Prison. Located a safe distance from Boston, Massachusetts, it is the oldest existing prison for women in this country. Built in 1877 for 452 women, Framingham now has 646 residents.

“In the beginning…” I was initially invited by Sr. Maureen Clark, CSJ, to share annually in her loving, dedicated service and care of the women at Framingham. For 30 years, Maureen has been the heart and soul of the Boston Archdiocese prison chaplains’ ministry efforts. I never imagined that in my 80s I would be doing prison ministry and writing books.

What was my initial prison experience? Strange and mysterious are the ways of God! The day before my very first visit, as I entered a guest residence on the Boston College campus, suddenly and unexpectedly I plunged head over heels down 13 stone steps! I met the Framingham women the next morning — sore, bruised, and hurting, but not broken!

We shared all that pain in common. “If he comes to us hurting like this, we can trust him.”

What do we do on a retreat day in this prison? It is what God does! During the year, Maureen, through personal contact, has carefully prepared a small group of women to be ready to enter into a personal and shared reflective retreat experience. Using the Emmaus scripture passage from Luke’s Gospel (Luke 24: 13-35), we invite them to share their daily prison walk with Jesus — “what has been happening these past few days/months” in their lives. Everything shared by everyone is held in strict confidence. Confidentiality and trust is critically important in prison ministry. This retreat group is safe, supportive, and caring.

Understandably, these women look forward to this annual retreat together. It has been a source of strength and renewed hope for them. This loving, caring, supportive experience gives them a sense of “not being alone” within the brutal confines of the prison walls. Listening attentively to one another and vulnerably sharing their experiences against the pattern of the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus has been a tear-filled, profound faith experience for all of us. “Didn’t our hearts burn within us….”

Through this retreat experience over the years they have formed supportive, healthy friendships which are so important in a stark, brutal prison environment. If a definition of community is “the achievement of common meaning,” this retreat experience has given them an experience of a faith community through their common experience, common reflection, common judgments, and common commitment to make the best of their present life situation. Empowered to use their gifts, they remain free in prison!

Have they made poor decisions? Of course. Who among us has not? Nathan to David: “That man is you.” We are not our mistakes! These women are learning and growing in very difficult situations. They should not be identified by their mistakes for the rest of their lives.

The privilege of being with these women has had a profound effect on me in so many ways. I respect them for the persons they are — women loved by God. I relate to them as I imagine Jesus would…and does: reverencing their person and respecting them as women; open and welcoming with no pre-judgments! I meet and accept them as they are — gifts to me at this time in my life.
I am Phil the Prophet.” He had a deep bass voice accented with a scratchiness from an incessant cough. “I come here every night and no one is ever here, not ever. Please leave.”

This was how I met Phil the Prophet in the fall of 2001 on a park bench in Kansas City, Missouri. Phil the Prophet was a homeless man. From him I learned about the “sacred territories of the destitute,” as he put it. Safe places free from disruption and danger that he and others claim as their own.

From our interactions and subsequent friendship, I became impassioned about the homeless. And when it came time to write about their experiences, it would be the voice and spirit of Phil the Prophet I drew from.

In 2004, I co-founded Full Circle Theatre Company, an organization dedicated to presenting social issues through performance. Our first foray came in the form of a play, Whispers from the Streets. Drawing on interviews with hundreds of men and women experiencing homelessness, we wrote a series of monologues using their words and their stories. Our aim was to put names to faces that are often overlooked or avoided.

Whispers from the Streets was the first of 30 plays Full Circle Theatre Company would write and produce in five years, always embracing topics of social justice to generate a more deepened awareness of our world. Some have interpreted my use of theatre as giving a voice to the voiceless, but I merely make a space where voices can be bravely revealed and safely listened to.

In these past five years of my Jesuit formation, I have come to recognize creating safe and brave spaces as integral to my vocation — whether it is as a spiritual director on a retreat, accompanying male prostitutes on the streets of Chicago, through dialogue with LGBT+ persons about their faith, or wherever I find myself surrounded by people. Designing intentional spaces was inspired by my experiences as a theatre artist. These spaces are essential to building communities, moving us from strangers to neighbors. We have a chance to listen to stories and experiences, thoughts, ideas, perspectives, and beliefs. And when all these things are in concert with each other, we have authenticity. We have the Kingdom.

Phil the Prophet believed he had value and something to offer, that he was worth paying attention to. That is true for all of us. My work as a Jesuit and theatre artist invites opportunities for people to hear one another to discover our differences, our likenesses, and our humanity. At least that is my hope and my prayer.

By the year 2020 ... the whole of the world will be homeless; look’n for a piece of meat to eat, water to drink, shelter from the rain. It’ll be then, in that time, you’ll ask for help from the likes of me. We appreciate what we got and what we don’t. We can survive.

Phil the Prophet believed he had value and something to offer, that he was worth paying attention to. That is true for all of us. My work as a Jesuit and theatre artist invites opportunities for people to hear one another to discover our differences, our likenesses, and our humanity. At least that is my hope and my prayer.

Fr. Michael Rossmann, SJ, will join the vocation team as a vocation promoter in January 2018 after completing a licentiate in sacred theology degree at Boston College School of Theology and Ministry.

What is a Mission?

When a Jesuit first enters the Society, he is missioned to learn at the novitiate. As a Jesuit prepares to go home to God, he is missioned to pray for the Church and Society. A Jesuit’s entire life is an intentional act of being sent to serve the world for the greater glory of God.

To be missioned to a particular ministry, such as serving as a professor, rector, superior, or one of the many other assignments Jesuits perform, is a core tenant of a Jesuit’s identity. Assignments come from an ongoing Ignatian discernment process between the individual Jesuit and their superior, but the mission ultimately comes from Christ himself, the one who was sent by the Father. It is by being sent that the Jesuit becomes the companion of Jesus in service of the world, wherever the needs are greatest.

Spiritual
We give thanks for the following Jesuits who have gone home to God.

Fr. Charles A. Hofmann, SJ
March 22, 1933 – August 20, 2017
“Chuck was a fairly private man but he was an excellent listener and always had time for a good conversation. He took an interest in the activities of his fellow Jesuits and was eager to hear what was new in their ministries.”

Teacher at Colegio San Jose Arequipa in Peru; student counselor at St. Xavier High School in Cincinnati; clinical psychologist at Loyola University Chicago Medical Center, Archdiocesan Consultation Services in Cincinnati, House of Affirmation in San Francisco, John Carroll University, Loyola University Chicago, Jesuit Institute for Family Life Network in Los Altos, California, and Faber Jesuit Community in Cincinnati.

Fr. Bernard J. Streicher, SJ
November 11, 1928 – August 17, 2017
“When one first saw Bernie, he was a very serious man who hid a dry sense of humor and a droll smile. He never missed the incongruities of life.”

English teacher, subminister, rector, and department chair at Saint Ignatius High School in Cleveland; English teacher at St. John’s Jesuit High School in Toledo, Ohio.

Fr. John “Jack” J. Kenealy, SJ
June 17, 1927 – July 2, 2017
“Father Jack was a true and great missionary in the classical sense of the word. He loved the people of Bihar, India, whom he was sent to serve. As an expression of his commitment to them, he adopted a very simple lifestyle, which he maintained to the very end.”

Pastor and assistant pastor of Shapur; assistant pastor of Jamalpur (Basuni), Shahpur, and Jamalpur (Bariapur); teacher at St. Xavier’s, Jaipur; judge of Patna Diocesan Marriage Tribunal; treasurer and archivist of Patna Diocese; administrator and treasurer of Ara; assistant treasurer of Patna Jesuit Society.

Br. John F. Buchman, SJ
September 10, 1933 – May 30, 2017
“Known by many as ‘Bucky,’ John was a wonderful Jesuit full of goodness and kindness. He was a hard worker and someone who fostered community. In the tradition of the great Jesuit brothers, Bucky cared for people very well.”

Administrative assistant to the rector, house manager, cook, and worked in the business office, book store, and cafeteria at Brebeuf Jesuit Preparatory School and the Brebeuf Jesuit Community in Indianapolis; cook at Milford Novitiate in Ohio and Bellarmine School of Theology in North Aurora, Illinois; worked at Loyola Youth Retreat Center in Milford, Ohio.

Fr. John “Jack” D. Cuddigan, SJ
December 21, 1929 – May 30, 2017
“Jack was a gifted Jesuit priest. During his long years of ministry, he moved easily between teaching, administration, and pastoral ministry.”

History teacher at Creighton University in Omaha; Marquette University High School in Milwaukee; and Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington; academic administrator at Rockhurst College in Kansas City, Missouri; Wheeling Jesuit University in Wheeling, West Virginia, and Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles; superintendent of schools and director of deferred giving for the Diocese of San Diego; pastor of Ss. Peter and Paul Catholic Church in Mankato, Minnesota.

Fr. Robert W. Leiweke, SJ
December 5, 1927 – April 11, 2017
“Bob was a holy, quiet, competent, supportive Jesuit whom people found easy to trust and whose advice they found unfailing wise.”

Spiritual director at St. Bonifacius in Minnesota, Emmaus in Des Moines, the Archdiocese of Omaha, and the Archdiocese of Milwaukee; founding member of Marquette’s Center of Ignatian Spirituality; religion teacher at Campion Jesuit High School in Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, and Creighton Preparatory School in Omaha; rector at Creighton Prep; assistant to the rectors of the Creighton University and Marquette University Jesuit Communities.

Br. William E. Biernatzki, SJ
December 3, 1931 – April 8, 2017
“Known by many as ‘Bucky,’ John was a wonderful Jesuit full of goodness and kindness. He was a hard worker and someone who fostered community. In the tradition of the great Jesuit brothers, Bucky cared for people very well.”

“John was a gifted researcher, professor, and scholar. He authored and edited many books, including The Wily Jesuits and the Monita Secreta and On the Suppression of the Society of Jesus.”

Professor of Latin and Greek, chair of the Classics Department, and freshmen dean at Loyola University Chicago; regional secretary for the USA and English-speaking Western Europe at the Jesuit Curia in Rome; associate pastor of St. Xavier Church in Cincinnati; Latin teacher at Loyola Academy in Wilmette, Illinois; author and editor.
Collaborating with God
By Fr. Ed Sthokal, SJ

Among my favorite authors is the Jesuit Fr. Pierre Teilhard de Chardin (1881-1955) — who envisioned human beings as collaborators with God in the ongoing creation of the world and, at the same time, collaborators with Christ in the ongoing redemption of the human race.

All this was made possible because in creating human beings, God endowed us with certain talents, skills, and abilities — abilities to fashion, to design, to put together, to build. This would make people creators with a small “c.” To create, one needs the necessary materials. Sometimes these materials are at hand. At other times, they have to be discovered. This can take a long time. For example, about the turn of the twentieth century, steel, oil, and electricity were discovered relatively simultaneously. It wasn’t long before large skyscrapers began to appear in every large city. Cement highways came to crisscross the country. The old lamplighter was well on his way to extinction.

Not every person is called to build planes, trains, or space stations, but every person is required to build his or her own life (Chardin, Divine Milieu, pages 60-61). Weaving Chardin’s thoughts into a retreat does not detract from it, but can greatly enhance it. The same holds true for modern physics.

Finally, each person is given talents, skills, abilities, and a certain amount of time in which to put his or her life all together — physically, intellectually, spiritually. That is what life is about. That is what a retreat is about. Putting it all together. ☀️

Father Ed Sthokal, SJ, is a former retreat director at Demontreville Jesuit Retreat House in Lake Elmo, Minnesota. He now resides at a senior Jesuit healthcare community.

Peru Province – June 15-25
Spiritual leaders: Pat Fairbanks, SJ, Kevin Flaherty, SJ, and Matt Garr, SJ

Eastern Africa Province – June, 2018
(exact dates TBD)
Spiritual leader: Dan O’Hare, SJ

Midwest Jesuits and colleagues are immersed in a variety of international projects. We participate in twinning relationships, or convenios, with Jesuit provinces in Eastern Africa, Kohima (Northeast India), and Peru. Twinning emphasizes a cross-cultural, two-way partnership that includes financial support and, more importantly, apostolic, formation, and educational exchanges across provinces.
